Birthing Justice

Documentary (discussion to follow)

Welcome and Introduction by Jasmine Young and Maleka James

The Tank Room 048

Birthing Justice is a film that centers Black women's lived experience, following them through the journey of pregnancy, delivery, postpartum periods, and the structures and systems that have resulted in racial disparities in maternal and infant health. Following the film, a facilitated discussion will be conducted by Sharon Hawkins, MPA, MSN-Ed, RN and the Director of the Health Equity Activation Think Tank in the Fitz Center for Leadership in Community at the University of Dayton.

Would you like to earn CMEs? Sign up for the Black Maternal Health Equity & Cultural Competency Programming Initiative, available now until November 1st, 2024.
